New York City facts

SKYSCRAPER CITY

The most famous New York skyscraper is the Empire State Building. When it was built in 1931, it was the tallest building in New York. In 1972 the World Trade Center was built and it became the tallest building. Sadly the World Trade Center was destroyed in terrorist attacks in 2001 – and so the Empire State Building became the tallest building in NYC again.

One World Trade Center has been the number one skyscraper in NYC since 2013.

A BRIDGE THAT MOVES

The Brooklyn Bridge connects Manhattan and Brooklyn. It's a suspension bridge and hangs from huge cables, so it can move a little and that's normal. But in 1883 suspension bridges were new, and people didn't know this. The story goes that a few days after it opened, when there were thousands on the bridge, it moved. Everyone panicked, and 12 people died. Today tourists love to walk across the bridge and take photos of the famous skyline.

The workers who built the bridge sometimes had to sleep up there.

Hey howyadooin.
Welcome to the Big Apple!

 That's another name for New York.*

WELCOME TO LIBERTY!

The Statue of Liberty opened in 1886. It was a present from the French to the Americans, one hundred years after they won their independence from the British. The statue stands on an island in New York Harbor and has welcomed millions of immigrants to the US.

*You have to climb 354 steps
to the crown.*

*Lady Liberty's nose is 1.37 m

CENTRAL PARK

More than 1.6 million people live in Manhattan and they are lucky to have Central Park as their backyard. Here you can find a lake, a castle, tennis courts, baseball fields and 20 playgrounds. There's even a swimming pool that people use as an ice rink in winter.

Mood: 😊 happy

Today was just a quiet Sunday at home. My friends Aka and Jareez came by. It was hot in our apartment, so we sat on the stoop and just chilled. That's us in the photo. Then mom brought some food and we had a barbecue on the stoop. Some neighbors came by too. We chatted, listened to some music – it was cool. I love our hood and I love our stoop. It's so Brooklyn!

Mood: 😞 tired

Today was crazy! First I played a baseball game in the park with my team. We won and the coach said I played well. Mom was there and she cheered – embarrassing! In the evening I went with Jareez and his parents to see my favorite basketball team – the Brooklyn Nets against the LA Lakers. The Nets won – cool! Tomorrow is Sunday – no big plans.

Mood: 😐 OK again

A day of disasters! In the morning I fell asleep on the subway and missed my stop. So I was late for school. Later, when I was coming home I lost my subway ticket and I had to walk ten blocks. So I'm tired and mom is angry (tickets are expensive). What a day! Now I'm going to listen to some music and everything will be OK again! Check out KRS-One for some cool New York rap music!

Mood: 😊 good

Hi! I'm from Brooklyn. Manhattan is nice, but Brooklyn is the best part of NYC. We have everything here – great neighborhoods (we say hoods), with cool music, great food (like Junior's diner), and great places to go (check out the beach at Coney Island). If you asked me which is the best place in the world, I'd say Brooklyn. This is my first Brooklyn blog, so please leave your comments, like about where you live. Is it as cool as Brooklyn?

Jayden's Postcard from Brooklyn

Leitfrage: Can you help Jayden's British pen pal understand this postcard?

Hey! Greetings from my favorite neighborhood in Brooklyn! I just took the elevator up to my apartment after a crazy day. I had a math test, then soccer practice, then I met my friends at the movie theater. This city is awesome! Wish you were here! – Jayden

1 Rewrite in British English

Jayden wrote this postcard in American English. Can you find all the AE words? Rewrite the postcard below in British English.

Trapped

The story of a friendship; adapted from the original by Shelby Raebeck

One evening I was on the basketball court behind the old church in my neighbourhood. I was alone, just practicing shooting hoops. I noticed an old blue Taurus wagon. Inside
5 there was a dark figure. I couldn't see him, but he was watching me.

A few days later I was on the court again. And again the same car pulled in. Then Lance Williams, the star of our high school 10 basketball team, got out. He was from Freedtown, a black area of the town.

"I heard you were good at backwards-dunking, white boy," he said. "Let's see how good you really are."

15 So we played – just him and me. "Good game," Lance said to me.

"Yeah," I said, slapping his hand. He walked through the gate and I saw that the back of his shirt was dark with sweat.

20 Then he turned around and looked through the fence of the court. "I've seen you in school," he said. "You don't say much." "No, I don't," I said. "Well, maybe there ain't nothing to say," Lance said and he walked 25 to his car.

In school, Lance said that I should join the team. And two weeks later we were playing against each other in a practice game. Lance was the star – I was the newcomer.

30 We were both tall, six feet two inches. Every time Lance scored, he said "Aw, come on now." Every time I scored, he smiled.

We won our first school game. Lance scored twenty, I scored nineteen. And after the 35 game I left my bike at school and I went with Lance in his car. We cruised on Main Street. Then we drove to the beaches. We didn't talk about the game. Lance just wanted to drive, from beach to beach.

Trapped

The story of a friendship; adapted from the original by Shelby Raebeck

40 When the police stopped us, I was nearly asleep. "What's going on, officer?" Lance said as he opened his window. "Where are you fellas going?" the cop asked. "Just driving," Lance said. "Where to?" "Nowhere," Lance answered.

45 "Have you been drinking?" "Did I do something wrong?" Lance asked. "Just a routine check," the police officer answered. "My ass," Lance muttered. "What's that?" The cop leaned in the window. I thought it might help if the cop saw me, so I leaned forward and said, "We had a game tonight." The cop looked from me back to Lance. "I guess you've never learned your manners," he said to Lance and he went back to his car.

50 We pulled in beside a small house in Freetown and Lance looked at me. "Did you believe that cop?" he said. "He was just bored," I said. "That wasn't the problem, Ricky," Lance answered. "Whatever." I opened the door of the car to get out. I thought we were going into Lance's house.

55 "Don't come to my house and tell me that cop stopped me because he was bored," Lance said. I closed the car door again. We sat there. I felt trapped. "It wasn't because he was bored," Lance said. "He's just a cop with nothing better to do than mess with a couple of high school kids," I answered. "He wasn't messing with you, Ricky."

60 I didn't answer. I just sat there. "Are you gonna say anything?" Lance said finally. "Sometimes," I said, "there ain't nothing to say."

65 The next day at practice, Lance and I didn't talk. Then, when I had a chance to score, Lance didn't try to stop me.

70 "You just gave up," I said to him. "It's just a practice," he said. "Who cares?"

75 "So let's just forget it, right?" I said to Lance.

"Forget everything."

"Right," he said.

80 "You think that the world is against you just because you're black," I said.

Lance took a step closer to me – his face was only inches from mine. I stared into his eyes.

"It's true," I said. "You think everybody is against you, you dumb-ass!"

85 Then Lance hit me, and I fell on the floor.

The coach came and asked us who started it.

We both said, "He did."

Then I looked at Lance and I thought about the last two months and I said, "I did."

Lance walked away. Then he turned and said, "So you do have something to say."

90 I just stood there. I looked at him and said nothing. I watched as he walked across the gym – and the distance between us grew bigger and bigger.
